

New product projects can be tricky... How are yours going?

In a recent survey of over 50 registrants of the upcoming Integrated Product Portfolio and Project Management Webinar, the following responses were captured:

How far out does your company's forward-looking view of new product project plans extend?

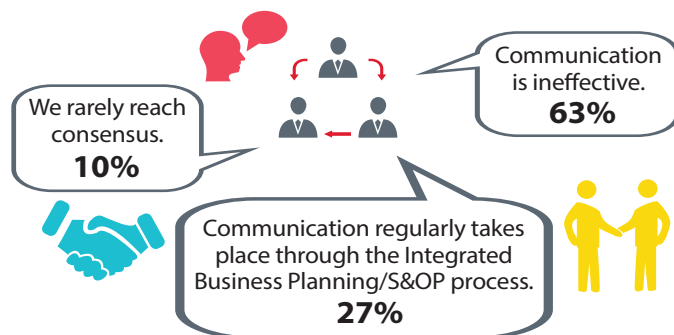

How far out is your company able to anticipate project resource requirements such as the hiring of people (engineers, R&D, technicians, etc.)?

What percentage of new products, which enter the project pipeline, actually gets launched?

How well is your new product consensus communicated to rest of the organization?

Are new product plans integrated into your Demand Plan (official forecast of the company)?

